Yes and no. There's a big push for talking about it, but there's a big difference between talking about it and actually doing something about it. I feel like the school has only done more in response to all of these other schools getting in trouble for cover ups and other stuff. It's responsive, rather than proactive. It seems to me that the school is more interested in saving their own skin and showing they are doing something about it, rather than letting the old acceptable ways happen.	White	Female
